

For the past eight years, Sausalito City Hall has pursued a pro-density agenda with no transparency for residents, and largely ignored a mounting fiscal debt. Hordes of rental bikes clogging our waterfront, increasing sewer fees and sales taxes illustrate city priorities gone awry.

As a litigation attorney I work on a daily basis to educate myself on the matters at issue, and negotiate toward successful resolution for all parties. These are qualities sorely in need on the current Council, which has become increasingly dysfunctional and less responsive to residents' concerns.

My name is Jill Hoffman. I successfully led the residents' fight against a recent high density rezoning program that targeted locations along Bridgeway, blocking residents' views and adding to parking and traffic congestion. I know what it's like to fight for a voice and not be heard. The next four years will be crucial to the direction of our town.

My husband and I moved to Sausalito 15 years ago because we wanted our family to be part of this unique, eclectic waterfront town. As a practicing attorney and a Reserve Navy JAG Officer, I will fight to protect Sausalito's small town character, and fiscal stability. Please visit www.JillForSausalitoCityCouncil.com .
