Residents First!

When Sausalito residents speak, the city council should listen.

Residents have always joined together to protect and preserve Sausalito's small town charm. Once it's lost, it can't be recovered.

As a Planning Commissioner, I rejected big development on our beach. As an attorney, I've successfully defended numerous municipalities and I'm not intimidated by threats from developers and special interests. As a mediator, I know how to bring people together to get things done.

City council decisions shouldn't be made late at night or behind closed doors. They should be made in open session early on the agenda so residents can participate. Let's leverage talented residents, not high-priced consultants.

Residents, not special interests, should plan bike paths and parks, and decide the future of our waterfront and Marinship. Sausalito must maintain its infrastructure, not merely fix easily-repaired roads, or sewers after they leak into the Bay. Emergency repairs mean increased taxes for residents.

With your support, I'll vote intelligently on our council to protect Sausalito's future, and act sensibly to preserve its present.
